Single Malts

Highlands

All Malts, which are produced northern a line between Greenock in the west and Dundee in the east are called Highland Malts. There are some more geographic divisions, but only Speyside malts are a real own group. Along the river Spey is the centre of the Malt production. In the taste the Highlands are different. You can find elegant, cognac-like Brands like Macallan and Glenlivet, as well as mild ones like Glenfiddich and Knockando or the heavy Brands like Clynelish. Further you can divorce the region into Northern, Western and Eastern Highlands.

Lowlands

South of the mentioned line are the Lowland Distilleries. Most of them are producing Grain Whisky, such as the light Glenkinchie, which is three times distilled.

Islay

The Isle of Islay delivers the strongest of all Malts. The amount of turf in the water gives all Whiskies a strong, sometimes almost medicinelike note of smoke. The famous of these from connoisseurs liked Malts are Lagavulin, Bowmore and Laphroaig.
